Dear Rob

The main purpose of this email is to formally thank you and your team for all their fantastic work over the past 12 months. I looked up today when we had our initial contact and it was back on 15 July 2016, so almost exactly one year ago. And what a year it has been!

We had obviously not met before and I was given your name by a former colleague, Ben Lamzed. From the first moment I contacted you, you were committed, dedicated and professional throughout. Your knowledge and experience has been invaluable throughout the redelivery and sale of these aircraft and we would not hesitate to recommend you and to work with you again.

I hope we get the opportunity to work with Jet Research again; certainly, we would not consider any other company for this kind of work again. Could you please relay my sincerest thanks to all of your team; not least to Tim Lenderman, Harry Miller, Ernesto Garcia, Rodrigo Perez, Maria and anybody else I have omitted to mention. And a big thank you to Debbie for her patience and sense of humour. But mostly, a real big thanks to you Rob. Your input has been critical to the successful outcome of this project.

That we have returned over $45m to a client for a pair of 10-year old A319s demonstrated the successful team work between Probus Aviation and Jet Research and is something we can all be rightly proud of.

Please feel free to use as much as this as you wish as a testimonial for new clients you might pursue; aside, of course, from the financial numbers in the above paragraph! I am happy to be contacted by anybody to give you guys a reference at any time.

I sincerely hope our paths cross again before too long.

Thank you again and good luck for the future.

Best regards
